The Rising Detroit Caricaturist. Caricature is fast creeping into and claiming a place in all enterprising journals of to-day. The Detroit Times of Saturday came out with what purports to be a caricature. It may represent Roscoe Conkling and Seven-mule Barnum trying to eat in harmony the Demo-Independent melon. They have cut out but one slice, and have taken but a single bite apiece, and yet it has so affected their internal mechanism that tears of agony stream down their cheeks and both have tightly clasped the seat of commotion with their clenched hands. Brezee promised to come out on the side of the people, and the first effort of his goggle-eyed caricaturist will insure for him and his eternal prosperity.

A Praise Service.

The Rev. A. R. Merriam, conducted the "praise" meeting last evening at the Park Congregational Church. The audience was quite large, and the services, consisting I realy of choir and congregational singing, we very interesting. Mr. Merriam delivered a short discourse on Music, tracing its mythological, legendary and sacred history, emphasizing and dwelling on its beauty and spiritual power in religion, and its force and effect in secular matters.

MRS. SURRATT'S EXECUTIONER.

An Interview With Him Yesterday at the Morton. C. Rath, of Jackson, who was a guest at the Morton yesterday, and is a mail agent on the Michigan Central railroad, between this city and Detroit, had some remarkable experiences as a soldier during the war of the Rebellion. In a short-conversation with him last evening, a Mouning Telegram reporter learned a part of his history, which is worthy of a passing note. At the time of the assassination of President Lincoln, Mr. Rath was serving on the staff of Gen. Hartranft, whose corps was doing service near Appomattox, Va. Gen. Hancock, then in command of the department of Washington, summoned Gen. Hartranft and staff to his a sistance, and Mr. Rath was detailed as Provost, at the time Mrs. Surratt, Payne and the other conspirators were under sentence of death. After the sentence of death had been pronounced against them Mr. Rath was ordered by Gen. Hancock to erect four gibbets, though it was unofficially intimated that but three would probably be needed. All concerned believed that Mrs. Surratt was the doubtful victim, and on that account Mr. Rath said that he tied her noose with but five turns, instead of the ominous regulation seven. The time set for the execution was between the hours of one and three p. m., on the Friday named in the order, and none of the officials concerned about the prison doubted that a respite would defer Mrs. Surratt's execution. But shortly before the fatal hour, about 11 o'clock a. m., the counsel for the accused had Gen. Hancock arrested on a warrant issued by a justice of the peace, hoping thus to complicate matters so that the hour of death might be tided over and their clients saved. In this, however, they made a fatal mistake, as a posse of military released Gen. Hancock from the hands of the civil authorities, but not in time to allow him an opportunity to use his influence with the war department and President Johnson, in Mrs. Surratt's behalf. Payne's confession that Mrs. S. knew nothing of the conspiracy, if it could have been used in time would have, it was thought, been an offset to the denial of Mrs. S., that he had stopped at her house. Had Gen. Hancock been left to use his influence, Payne's confession been made in time, or even Mrs. Surratt's son been captured with the rest of the conspirators,

THE HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Mr. Rath believes Mrs. Surratt would have never been hung. Her daughter Annie,

then a girl of about sixteen, and for a time

also a prisoner, was afterward respectably

Interesting Services at Powers's Opera

House Last Night. The "Harvest Festival" services, in behalf of the Unitarians, last night, drew out a very arge attendance, people being obliged to stand on the lower floor and in the dress circle. The stage was profusely decorated with wheat sheaves, corn, fruit, &c., all emblematic of the occasion. The idea of the service was to give appropriate attention to Thanksgiving. The choir considerably enlarged, he music was furnished by Powers' Opera fouse orchestra. The latter must not be passed without a compliment for the able manner in which they executed their part of the program, the music all being outside of the style they are accustomed to playing. The services opened with a hymn by the choir and orchestra. Then followed, interspersed with music by the orchestra, and a harp solo by Mr. William Miles Cleveland, Ohio, the exercises by the Sunday School children, consisting of recitations, pertaining, in sentiment, to the anniversary. Prof. Strong delivered an address intended for the consideration of the Sunday school class. He offered many words of good advice to the little folks, cautioning them to avoid evil and to strive to lead useful lives. using by way of illustrations some interesting incidents. He was followed by Dr. Brigham, who commenced by saying that it was a curious place to bring a doctor before such a large audience as this. He desired to caution the young men in particular, and counseled them to a careful study of the Bible; that there is a tendency in this age to ignore and scoff at the Bible. Some refer to the mistakes of Moses. All great men have made mistakes. Moses performed a great service when he led the people out of Egypt and showed them the promised land, That proud figure which has lived in history for 4,000 years will shed its light down into the centuries to come, and his teachings will live ae long as we have a civil code. The Dr. said he owed much of his success in life to chipters his father used to read from the Bible every morning. The doctor closed with some excellent advice to the children. Rev. Henry Powers concluded the services by giving a brief outline of the object of the Sunday School, and urged all who had no fixed place of worship to join it. A collection was then taken to secure funds with which to procure suitable clothing for those children who hesitated about going to the school because their clothes were shabby. A hymn was sung and services closed.

THE EVANGELISTS Their Services in This City Ended Last Evening.

The evangelistic services of Messrs, Whittle and McGranushan in this city, closed last night, and to-day they depart for Detroit, to commence a series of meetings in that city to-morrow evening. These gentlemen began their work on Wednesday evening, Nov. 12, and, with the exception of Saturday, have held one or more meetings every day, including yesterday. As a result of their efforts nearly a hundred persons, not members of any church, manifested a desire to consecrate themselves to Christ, while many lukewarm Christians renewed their obligations to His service. The services at the First Baptist Church called out an audience which crowded the utmost capacity of the house, and an immense audience was in attendance last evening, the aisles and galleries being full, and many standing during the entire service. Mr. Whittle, in the evening, discussed the text, Hebrews ii. 3, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation," with great earnestness and power of expression. At his conclusion a dozen or more, went forward to the a tar. The song by Mr. and Mrs. McGrannahan, "I Will," the words and music of which were composed by the former, were sung with strong effect. The inspiration of its composition was the occasion of a meeting held by Messrs. Whittle and McGrannaban at Limerick, Ireland, when one hundred men stood up and answered, one by one, "I will" to an invitation to follow Christ's example. The larger number of songs sung at these meetings are Mr. McGrannahan's own composition.

The Rev. H. P. Welton will conduct the services to-morrow evening in the same church, and perhaps continue them through the week. This gentleman informed a TEL-EGRAM reporter last evening that Messrs. Whittle and McGrannahan charge no expenses, sell no books or photographs, and utterly refuse to allow any committees to be appointed to solicit a penny by way of remuneration. If they receive any compensation in a worldly way it comes entirely unsolicited on their part.

A LETTER FROM MR. BAYNE.

An Explanation of His Part in the Trouble With the Braun's.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 27 .- To the Editor of THE TELEGRAM: Having read your notice of Braun's assault on me, I am of the opinion that it is calculated to do me an injustice and that I have a right to a more correct statement of facts. I did not use Mrs. Braun's letter as her statement would indicate, but put it in the waste basket and have not mentioned it. Your report makes me say that I have never made any statement prejudicial to Mrs. Braun, and then you introduce a witness whose identity you conceal to prove it false. Now what I did and do say is that I have not said the things Braun deemed proper in the society of such as congregate in a First Ward dive. I cannot express my disgust at being drawn into such an affair, but must, it seems, pay the penalty of an unwholesome business acquaintance. The attack was one any man can make on another for effect. Any statements I have made in regard to Mrs. Braun, I am fully prepared to substantiate in the courts, and I earnestly desire the opportunity which was my object in having Braun arrested.

Until this last brutal development I have felt different on account of others who must suffer. In this matter I feel that it has taken a lifetime to build a reputation, and any person, however low, may tarnish it, as it takes an architect to build a fine residence, but the vilest incendiary may destroy it. I only ask simple justice without prejudice, such prejudice as this cowardly attack is cal-culated to produce, and I challenge the most thorough investigation of the whole matter and the motive that prompted it.

Respectfully, JAS. BAYNE.

The parents or guardians of the young man or young woman who will, after the summer vacation, enter upon a course of business instruction and drill, should obtain The parents or guardians of the yo all the advantages offered by the many ex-cellent institutions that seek for their pat-ronage. One college offers this inducement, another that, and yet there are possi-bly not over a dozen colleges in the United States that are entitled to the definition of the term awarded these schools by James A. Garfield. The particular commercial college which so aroused the enthusiasm of the martyr President in behalf of these thoroughly practical schools can not now be located; and yet, after all, we can locate those that come up to the high Garfield standard, for they are few and well known. Recently we visited the Grand Rapids. Mich., Business College, founded and con-ducted by Prof. C. G. Swensberg, an old friend of the Garfields, and never before did we so fully realize the importance, power, and scope of these institutions. Professor Swensberg has sent from the college scores of young men and women who have gone out to become officers for great corporations, and his graduates are found occupying positions of trust in almost every large town in the section of country tributary to the col-lege, and even in far distant cities. Much of this is no doubt due to the fact that the proprietor of the school is also connected as stock-holder and director, or in official capacity, with many of the largest enterprises in the West, manufacturing and financial as well as educational. There is no man in the West so able to aid our youth to fit themselves for and to secure for them an entrance into ac-tual and profitable business life as Professor Swensberg. Character is everything in a school. All attention should be given to this point by parents before sending sons or daughters away to receive, perhaps, a cheap gilding, falsely called business edu-cation. We deem it a pleasure and a duty to call attention to this school, and advise our readers to send for the College Journal and become fully acquainted with its special features and advantages. - Inter Ocean, July 3, 1884,

Artificial Light

In these days of progress there is a denand for better means of illuminat than ever before. The dazzling brilliancy of the electric light makes our comp kerosene lamps as dim as tallow dips in the comparison. This demand has been fully met by the introduction of the Son Lamps. They are necessarily made metal because the draft or chimney extends down through the center of lamp. The wicks are five inches wide and give a light of forty-five candle power, equal to three gas burners. These lamps were brought out at the close of last season, but the price was so high-$6 each-but few were sold. Owing to the enormous demand which has sprung up, they are now produced at a price within the reach of all, and sold for $3 in brass and $3.50 in nickel, complete with ten inch porcelain shade. To persons troubled with weak eyes or those who desire to preserve their eyesight by means of a good light, the Sun Lamp will prove a blessing.

The New Styles of Hanging Lamps are made of a gold color solid bronze metal. and trimmed with cut glass prisms and decorated shades. The dome-shaped shades look the best, but we imagine the angle of reflection from the cone shape is best for throwing light down. These lamps are also much cheaper than last year. They are now sold at from $5 to $7 each. Fine table lamps are furnished with duplex or twowick burners, giving double the light of the single wick burners. There are many styles of these lamps on exhibition, including solid For information received thanks are due Messrs. H. Leonard & Sons, importers, 16 Monroe street.

Radiant Home BASEBURNER 1884.

As manufacturers of Base-Burning Stoves axclusively, the makers of the RADIANT HORE have been before the public for over seventeen years. There can be but few persons in this country who are not familiar with the high reputation gained by the RADIANT HOME STOVES - a reputation nor of bot-house growth, forced by artificial means decaying as rapidly as it appears, but a steady vigorous growth, built up on the only true basis viz.: that of genuine morit. It has been their aim and constant study to so improve and perfect the KADIANT HOME STOVES, that they should deservedly rank highest in the market. With this aim constantly in view, as each year's experience indicated something wherein they could improve the working qualities, increase the heating capacity, or render more attractive in ornamentation, they have spared no pains or expense to accomplish this object. As evidence that success has attended their efforts. they point to the ever increasing popularity of the HADIANT HOME TOVES. Their intrinsic merit has proved their best scent and advertiser. In the 1884 pattern they have made some changes which they think very desirable and materially improved. The changes consist of an entirely new and larger fire not and grate, which adds largely to the heating capacity, without increased consumption of fuel. The ash pix is made deeper. taking a larger seb-jam. The urn is altogether new, made of spun bruss, nickel plated and beautiful in design, greatly adding to the seneral attractive appearance. They confidently claim, as bronze and the popular hammered brass. heretofore, that the BAMANT HOME Proves, in quality and smoothness of custing through fit ing and mounting, and as powerful beaters, not only have no superiors, but they stand unrivalled.
